A Perth funeral company is proud to celebrate their 25 years in business. Started by Bill and Ellie Dobson in 1998, the business has always prided itself on offering the standard of funeral services that they believe every individual deserves. They are a family owned, independent, Western Australian company that believes in dignity and respect.

Ellie Dobson, co-founder of Funeral Care, says: "Over the past 25 years, we have helped countless families through the difficult grieving process associated with losing a loved one. We offer each of these people personalized care, so that they can create a package that they believe the deceased would have loved, thereby honoring that person's memory. We have offered our services for 25 years now, and we aim to continue to do so with the same standard of service for many more years to come."

The funeral directors in Perth pride themselves on taking the time needed to look after families. Their service is not run as a business, therefore, but more as a community in which people can come together and find support. Ellie and her team want to offer their genuine care and compassion to the families that they have worked with, taking the time to make them feel as comfortable as possible.

This genuine attention is something that they have been greatly appreciated for. "I was blown away by the care and how they went out of their way for the family members," says Rachel D. on the funeral company's website. "It was the genuine caring and empathy - they made me feel relaxed and comfortable. I knew that my mum was in safe and respected hands. I certainly wouldn't have any hesitation in recommending them, I really felt like I was part of the family. They were brilliant, absolutely brilliant."

Although Bill has passed away, Ellie has continued his legacy with the company that they built together. Funeral care, according to Ellie, is something that has to be done on a personal level. No two people are the same, and neither should their funerals. Their goal is to help families grieve and give them the best possible memory of the journey to the final resting place of their loved one.
