Her Pow has announced the launch of its Organic Pretend Food Choices play set on Amazon.com. The 125-piece set features miniature plastic toys made to realistically mimic food and kitchen items while engaging kids in hours of imaginative play. From a six-slice pizza to ice cream, the items are equally suited for boys and girls, three and up.

Designed to encourage healthy eating, the set includes red apple, green apples, bananas, asparagus, carrots, watermelon, a whole miniature chicken, plus broccoli and cauliflower. There are eggs, orange slices, cucumber, strawberries, French fries, hamburgers, hot dogs, and organic milk, as well as crackers, French bread, potatoes, and ice cream cones plus a cherry pie, juice cartons, and condiments. All of these enable youngsters to pretend to shop for and work with groceries and prepare meals.

The set also includes fun food fact labels. These help kids learn about organic and healthy foods. The complete set includes all four food groups. Each piece can be integrated with other kitchen play sets, allowing for hours of imaginative play. Attempting to eat the pieces is not recommended, as this can result in broken teeth. Toddlers can spend as much time as they want making pretend meals.

The product is suited as a gift for small children. It also used in preschools and doctors' offices. Shipping in a 1.9lb package, Organic Pretend Food Choices play food set is available now on Amazon. It can be purchased at $29.99 per set, with free shipping on orders over $49.

Customers can now take advantage of purchasing via a secure shopping cart, 1-Click ordering, user reviews, and a Wish List. Customers will receive a refund if not completely satisfied.
