September 17, 2026

SPRINGVILLE, UT - September 17, 2026 -
A Plus Garage Door Repair has expanded its presence in Springville, Utah, positioning the company as a dedicated local resource for homeowners facing common garage door problems ranging from broken springs to unreliable openers. The company operates from a location at 1190 N Main St #17, Springville, UT 84663, and serves residents throughout Utah County with repair, installation, and maintenance services.

The introduction of A Plus Garage Door Repair - Springville, UT addresses a practical need for many area households. Garage doors represent one of the largest moving components in a typical home, and when they fail, the disruption can affect daily routines and household security. The company focuses on the issues homeowners encounter most often, including broken torsion springs, stuck doors, noisy operation, damaged panels, worn rollers, faulty eye sensors, and openers that no longer respond reliably.

Beyond emergency repairs, the company also assists homeowners who are considering new garage doors. Its installation options include steel, glass, insulated, aluminum, wood, and wood composite doors, along with custom design guidance for those seeking a specific style. Maintenance offerings, such as annual lube and tune service and a 24-point inspection, are intended to help homeowners prevent small problems from becoming larger failures.

Carrie Kelsch, owner of A Plus Garage Door Repair, noted that dependable service carries particular weight for local families. "A garage door is something most people never think about until it stops working, and then it becomes an immediate concern," Kelsch said. "Establishing a stronger local presence in Springville means homeowners have a nearby team they can turn to when a spring breaks or a door refuses to open, without having to wait or wonder who to call."

The company emphasizes safety as a central part of its message to homeowners. Torsion springs operate under high tension, and attempts to repair them without proper tools and training can result in injury. For that reason, the company advises against do-it-yourself repairs on spring systems and offers same-day service along with around-the-clock emergency dispatch for urgent situations.

Kelsch added that the range of garage door services by A Plus Garage Door Repair reflects the variety of concerns homeowners bring to the company. "People come to us with everything from a door that has become too noisy to a sensor that keeps the door from closing," Kelsch said. "Covering the full spectrum of issues under one roof allows homeowners to solve the problem correctly the first time."

The Springville location serves Provo, Orem, Mapleton, Spanish Fork, and other nearby communities within Utah County. The company is licensed and insured in Utah, holding Utah DOPL License #8979136-5501, and has accumulated more than 27,000 five-star reviews across its service network.
