Miami Lawn Service Shares How to Keep Grass Green This Summer

Miami, Fla. - Billy Goat, a Miami lawn service, has a few tips for keeping lawns nourished. With the hot temperatures this summer, it's hard to know when and how to properly water your lawn. As the heat continues, Billy Goat has tips to better your lawn care.

To start, lawns should get about an inch of water a week. Lawns actually do not need to be watered daily. At most, they should be watered two to three times a week. For lawn care in Miami, however, it is drastically hotter. Hotter areas need a bit of extra water; depending on the weather, you might need to water it more.

Billy Goat recommends to not water during the day. It is too hot during the day to water the lawn. The best times to water are early in the morning. Watering in the morning gives the lawn time to be completely nourished.

"We want all lawns to be taken care of properly this summer," said the owner of Billy Goat, Danny Macias. "It's important to take care of the world we live on... even the soil."

This Miami residential lawn care service strives to keep lawns looking the best they can. For more information, call Billy Goat at (305) 666-0111. You can also visit them on their website at thebillygoat.net.
