June 23, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Sports memorabilia dealer, Big Time Sports, occupying an office space in JGM Properties Earle Brown Plaza near Minneapolis in Minnesota, offers autographed Derek Jeter photograph as well as many more rare sports collectables.

Big Time Sports offers exclusive autographed items that are too limited to mass-advertise. The seasoned account executives at Big Time Sports share your passion for sports memorabilia and can offer unmatched personalized service.

Over the last 20 years, they have worked with many of the greatest athletes and teams, allowing you the most prized autographed items to fit any budget.

"If you are looking for the ultimate gift or something unique for yourself, feel free to contact one our account executives and we will provide you with information on our latest exclusive offerings," says Steve Granquist of Big Time Sports.

Big Time Sports offers MLB, NBA, and NFL memorabilia, including autographed jerseys, vintage footballs/basketballs/baseballs, autographed seatbacks, helmets, and more. All memorabilia has been authenticated by Big Time Sports and certifying that their products are 100% legitimate.

Sports Memorabilia is a $5 billion global market in which millions of collectors participate by buying and selling photos, cards, jerseys, balls and other related sports equipment.

The company says that if someone has the right player's autograph on the right piece of equipment at the right time, sports memorabilia can be a fantastic investment. For example, a rare, mint-condition tobacco card sold in 1992 for $451,000. It sold again in 2008 for $2.8 million, an increase of 521 percent over 13 years.

According to The Fiscal Times, sports memorabilia investing is an oddball idea that can actually make money. Some experts advise collectors to invest in single high-end memorabilia items instead of multiple lower-end items because high-end memorabilia can see tremendous appreciation.

Irwin Kishner, head of the Sports and Entertainment practice at Herrick, Feinstein LLP in New York, believes that if there is a limited number of a particular item, it will be worth more. Big Time Sports currently is selling a signed Derek Jeter 1st home run 16x20 photograph that has been strictly limited to only 22 pieces and each piece will be individually numbered within the edition.
