September 13, 2016 -
While vehicles are often seen as more than just a mode of transportation, for many people, their car is an extension of their personality, as well as a hobby to play around with. Butler Auto Recycling - Milton, based in Milton, FL, has announced that they have increased their stock of high quality recycled automobile parts for people looking at improving their cars.

Jim Butler, owner and founder of Butler Auto Recycling - Milton, says: "A car is so much more than just a car. It is something that you want to be seen in, and you want it to look and perform well as much as possible. However, achieving this can be very expensive. Thus, we're happy to announce that we have an extensive range of parts available in stock so people can transform their vehicle into a true power machine, at a price that they can afford."

The company aims to set itself apart by offering high quality products to their customers. They are so confident of their quality that they offer extensive warranties. Additionally, they have a strong focus on customer service, ensuring that the customer comes first every step of the way. This is also one of the reasons why they have sought and received Better Business Bureau accreditation, which is something that is rare for small local businesses in this type of industry.

Besides offering auto parts, the company also purchases and sells vehicles. Those who have a vehicle that they want to get rid of is encouraged to contact the company for further information. "Butler's Auto Recycling will help assist you in getting cash for your car or information on where you can donate your vehicle and which is the best route to take," adds Jim Butler. "A number of charity organizations offer a car donation program where you can get rid of your car and possibly take a tax deduction (consult your accountant), while helping those in need."

People are encouraged to contact Butler Auto Recycling for parts and vehicles, and to see how they want to work together with consumers to reduce the environmental impact of cars on the road through recycling.
