

Origination System Solutions Launches Redesigned Website for Loan Origination Technology

November 25, 2026

November 25, 2026 -
Origination System Solutions LLC has introduced a newly redesigned website developed by Code Charley, bringing a modernized digital presence to its loan origination technology resources. The updated site combines a professional interface, mobile-responsive layouts, and organized navigation intended to help visitors explore financial and property-related information with greater ease.

The redesign focuses on clean typography, intuitive navigation, and an accessible content structure. Flexible grids and scalable typography maintain a consistent browsing experience across desktop, tablet, and mobile devices, while reusable navigation patterns and organized content blocks support a cohesive look throughout the site. The Origination System Solutions New Website Design also includes a press release archive where visitors can locate updates and announcements in a single, organized location.

The refreshed platform serves as a central destination for information about the company's loan origination technology, including its Nexys and EDSCR systems. Nexys functions as a centralized platform for managing the loan origination process, offering organized application workflows, centralized borrower information, and team visibility. EDSCR provides a focused origination experience for investor lending, supporting workflows centered on real estate investors, rental properties, and debt service coverage ratio loan scenarios.

"The redesigned website reflects a commitment to clarity and usability," said a spokesperson for Origination System Solutions. "The updated layout organizes complex lending technology information in a way that visitors can navigate easily, whether they are viewing the site on a desktop or a mobile device."

The collaboration with Code Charley centered on usability, visual consistency, and establishing a foundation for future content updates. The design emphasizes readability through improved page hierarchy, prominent section headings, and balanced spacing, allowing visitors to scan information efficiently. These enhancements aim to communicate brand information effectively without distracting from the content itself.

"The new design direction gives the Origination System Solutions Brand a contemporary and consistent digital identity," the spokesperson added. "The site is structured to grow alongside the company, providing a reliable space for announcements, resources, and detailed information about origination technology."

The website redesign arrives as lenders continue to seek organized digital environments that improve visibility and coordination among loan officers, processors, operations teams, and borrowers. By centralizing information about digital applications, workflow management, document organization, and team collaboration, the updated site reflects the broader movement toward connected lending operations that reduce repetitive tasks and streamline the path from application through closing.

Origination System Solutions provides loan services and modern loan origination technology designed to streamline the lending process and improve borrower experiences. The company's offerings include DSCR loans, construction loans, bridge loans, fix and flip loans, and rehab loans, along with origination system solutions that help lenders centralize loan information, manage workflows, and scale their operations. Through platforms such as Nexys and EDSCR, the company supports lenders in moving beyond disconnected tools toward more organized and scalable lending operations.
