SoftBreath, which has recently released new yoga straps to help with flexibility and range of motion, has announced that the new product has already been receiving rave reviews. It is easy to see why the yoga belt straps are becoming a favorite of many people. This is because aside from enhancing a person's flexibility and range of motion, which are vital in yoga, the straps can also be used for those who are undergoing physical therapy, accident recovery, and rehabilitation.

Patrick Shawn from SoftBreath says: "We're so proud of our latest product. Yoga, for us, is a way of life, and we love to see how many people are starting to become interested in it. We want to make sure that those using yoga do it properly, and that they can push themselves to the very limit of their stretch. Our straps, which are completely safe and easy to use, make that possible."

The straps have been designed to improve range of motion and overall flexibility without needing a trainer or companion. Thanks to the belt straps, people are able to reach more positions in yoga and even in Pilates. The straps are made from highly durable materials, so there is no concern about it snapping during moves.

The device is also perfect for physical therapy, accident recovery, and other forms of rehabilitation. The strap is 8 foot long and can simply be looped through the metal D rings in order for it to function as a resistance band. Alternatively, it can be used at full length for back, thigh, calf, abdominal, shoulder, or arm stretches.

While only recently released, the item already rates as a five star product on Amazon, having received only positive reviews. People have commented on the fact that it is incredibly affordable when compared to other yoga straps, and that it is made from much more durable materials, making them feel safe during their stretches. Most importantly, people have mentioned that their physical therapists and trainers are happy to use them, and that they have seen an improvement in their range of movement as well.

The workout band is made from a durable, machine washable cotton. It is also available in a range of different colors. The company also offers a 100% satisfaction guarantee.
