

Tortilla Town Highlights Roasted Carnitas on Its Paso Robles Mexican Food Menu

November 19, 2026

PASO ROBLES, CA - November 19, 2026 -
Tortilla Town is drawing attention to its carnitas, a seasoned pork option that has a longstanding place on the restaurant's Mexican food menu in Paso Robles. The Paso Robles establishment, located at 1145 24th St B, Paso Robles, CA 93446, describes the dish on its official menu as seasoned pork roasted for hours until completely tender, giving diners a traditional protein choice across several menu items.

The menu lists the option as "Carnitas (Pork)," placing it among the meat selections that customers can choose when building their meals. Diners interested in carnitas tacos in Paso Robles can select the pork as a filling, and the same protein is available in gorditas, the Burrito El Jefe, and salads. This spotlight centers on an established offering rather than a new product, giving guests clarity on how the dish appears throughout the menu.

Each item that features carnitas comes with its own base preparation. Tacos are served on handmade tortillas, gorditas use handmade corn masa shells, and the Burrito El Jefe is wrapped in a handmade flour tortilla. These components provide the structure for the roasted pork across the different dishes, allowing guests to match the carnitas to the format they prefer.

Toppings and salsa selections round out the dishes. The menu lists fresh tomato pico de gallo, tomatillo green chile, and roasted red chile, giving diners a range of accompaniments to pair with the seasoned pork. Each salsa offers a distinct profile that guests can apply to tacos, gorditas, burritos, or salads according to their preferences.

As the owner Roger Sharp mentioned in this post, the goal is to give guests a consistent pork option they can order in whichever format suits them. The carnitas reflect the restaurant's attention to preparation. "Carnitas is a dish that rewards patience, and the seasoned pork is roasted for hours until it reaches a tender texture," adds Sharp.

"Offering carnitas across tacos, gorditas, the Burrito El Jefe, and salads means diners can enjoy the same roasted pork in different ways," Sharp added. "The menu is built so that each item has a clear description, from the handmade tortillas to the salsa choices that accompany the dish."

Guests who wish to review the full set of options can consult the menu in advance of ordering or visiting. The restaurant encourages diners to explore the menu, where the carnitas listing and its placement among tacos, gorditas, the Burrito El Jefe, and salads are detailed alongside the available tortillas, toppings, and salsas.
