Foxbrim, a Florida based hair and skin care company, has restocked its 100 percent pure certified organic rosehip seed oil in its lineup of natural oils. Currently, the company offers pure neem oil, pure organic jojoba oil, pure castor oil, pure argan oil, as well as a number of specialized serums. Of these products, rosehip seed oil was so popular that Foxbrim ran out of stock and had to call in more inventory to meet the high demand.

Foxbrim is a company with a unique story and background. Founder Troy Johnston created the product line in the hopes of offering people hair and skin care products without the worry of reactions to chemicals and additives. By using only the most high-quality ingredients, Troy found a way to beat the acne that plagued him as a child, and provide people with clean and natural ways to remove makeup, condition hair, and treat nails, skin, and hair.

Rosehip seed oil has been used over the years to reduce the appearance of scarring, treat dry skin, remove signs of skin aging, and under eye darkness, as well as repair otherwise damaged skin. Hailing from the Chilean rose bushes, the oil soaks in quickly, leaving no greasy or sticky residue behind after use. Foxbrim describes the 100% Pure Certified Organic Rosehip Seed Oil as follows: "Rosehip seed oil is seeing a major resurgence in popularity. It had been one of those incredible substances that has been used for thousands of years ago by the ancient Mayans, Egyptians and Native Americans, who saw its usefulness as a skin protectant and healer. Today, people are going back to natural ingredients as a healthier alternative, and turning away from the chemical-centered beauty treatments of the past several decades."

To use the rosehip seed oil, Foxbrim suggests simply adding two to three drops to clean fingertips and massaging gently into the area where it is to be applied. Extra care should be paid to regions where sensitive skin resides, rubbing very gently until absorbed.
