

McClellan Family Chiropractic Shares Health Information on Local Radio

November 18, 2026

RAINBOW CITY, AL - November 18, 2026 -
McClellan Family Chiropractic recently took part in a community radio outreach visit with Sand Mountain Radio, appearing across three stations, WQSB, POWER 107.5 FM, and WKXX, to discuss the practice's work and the importance of health awareness. The November appearance gave the Rainbow City practice an opportunity to share information with listeners and connect with residents beyond its clinic setting.

The visit reflects an aspect of the practice's stated community involvement: working with local organizations and communicating about health and wellness. The practice's social media account also described a massage event held in connection with the day's activities, providing an additional opportunity for in-person interaction. The radio visits and the event brought together broadcast outreach and direct community engagement.

McClellan Family Chiropractic's website describes its approach as family and performance-based chiropractic care, with an emphasis on The 100 Year Lifestyle principles of optimum health, longevity, and wellness. The practice serves people at different stages of life and lists services that include family chiropractic, pediatric chiropractic, prenatal chiropractic, sports chiropractic, and wellness care. Its website also identifies education and information as important parts of its philosophy.

Dr. Mike McClellan, chiropractor and clinic director, said, "Community conversations create an opportunity to explain the role of chiropractic care and the range of topics that are part of a family's approach to health. Radio provides another way to share that information with people who may not have an opportunity to visit the practice or attend an event."

The practice's team page identifies Dr. Mike McClellan and Dr. Leslie McClellan as chiropractors and clinic directors. Both are graduates of Life University and have completed postgraduate study. Their listed areas of training include spinal biomechanics, auto-related and sports injuries, non-surgical low back and disc techniques, and pediatric chiropractic. The team page also notes their involvement with civic organizations and local schools.

Dr. Leslie McClellan said, "Health education is an important part of helping families make informed decisions. Conversations in community settings, including local radio, allow the practice to discuss general health topics and explain the principles that guide its work."

The practice's website presents chiropractic as part of a broader approach to health across different ages. Its service information covers the back, neck, shoulders, headaches and migraines, as well as wellness care and care for children and expectant mothers. These descriptions provide context for conversations about family chiropractic care. The practice's public materials also explain that its care model draws on The 100 Year Lifestyle, a framework centered on health, longevity, and wellness.

The November radio appearance adds a broadcast component to the practice's community connections. The social media post acknowledged the Sand Mountain Radio team and the people who participated in the day's activities. It identified WQSB, POWER 107.5 FM, and WKXX as the stations involved and described the visit as an opportunity to connect with the community and share information about taking care of personal health.

The radio visit is distinct from the practice's previously reported participation in local wellness gatherings and workplace events. It illustrates another setting in which the practice can communicate with residents, with a focus on general information rather than individual health advice. The accompanying massage event added a face-to-face element to the day's outreach.
