

Better Builders Highlights Design-Build Approach to Kitchen Remodeling Across Seattle Metro

November 23, 2026

SEATTLE, WA - November 23, 2026 -
Better Builders, a design-build remodeling contractor serving the Seattle metro area, has detailed its integrated design-build remodeling process, an approach that combines planning, design, and construction under a single team for homeowners undertaking major renovations.

The Better Builders kitchen remodel process has three stages: Discover, Design, and Build. During the Discover stage, project teams work to understand a homeowner's needs and goals. The Design stage focuses on reimagining the space and developing a detailed plan, while the Build stage covers the construction work itself. By keeping these phases connected within one company, the firm aims to reduce the communication gaps that can occur when design and construction responsibilities are divided among separate parties.

With more than 35 years of experience, the company provides a range of services that extend beyond Kitchen Remodeling to include bathroom remodels, home additions, basement renovations, whole-house remodels, and accessory dwelling unit construction. As a custom home builder, Better Builders also constructs tailored residences designed around the specific requirements of each client.

"The design-build model exists to give homeowners a clearer, more coordinated experience from the first conversation through final construction," said Pete Baughman, a representative of Better Builders. "When the same team guides design decisions and then carries them into the build, there are fewer surprises and a stronger alignment between what a homeowner envisions and what gets delivered."

The company's work spans numerous communities in the Seattle metro region, including Ballard, Bellevue, Bothell, Issaquah, Kirkland, Mercer Island, Redmond, Renton, Sammamish, Seattle, Shoreline, and Woodinville. Across these areas, the firm handles projects ranging from focused home remodeling updates to comprehensive whole-home transformations.

Sustainability remains a component of the company's methodology. As a member of Built Green, Better Builders incorporates sustainable products and building methods into its projects, reflecting broader industry movement toward environmentally conscious construction practices in the Pacific Northwest.

"Homeowners today are thinking about long-term value and function, not just appearance," Baughman said. "That is why the process starts with understanding how people actually live in their spaces before any design work begins."

Better Builders backs its completed projects with a five-year craftsmanship warranty that extends beyond common industry standards. The warranty reflects the company's stated emphasis on quality, integrity, and lasting value in its remodeling and construction work.
