Summit Scapes Construction Highlights Debris Hauling and Junk Removal Services

November 19, 2026

MANLIUS, NY - November 19, 2026 -
Summit Scapes Construction is highlighting its debris hauling and removal services together with large-scale junk removal and whole-property cleanouts. The company provides these options from its base in Kirkville, New York, for residential and commercial property owners across Central New York. Crews handle loading, hauling, disposal, and site cleanup for a range of materials that accumulate on properties.

Debris hauling and removal covers brush, yard debris, and stumps, including branches, hedge trimmings, and storm debris. The service also includes clean hardscape and masonry materials limited to concrete, block, brick, pavers, natural stone, and asphalt when no other materials are mixed in. Construction and mixed demolition debris such as lumber, drywall, decking, shingles, siding, insulation, and trim are accepted as well. A dump truck capable of carrying up to six tons per load is used, and a two-man crew performs all loading, hauling, and sweeping of the cleared area. A skid steer or mini excavator can be brought in for larger or heavier materials to improve efficiency on the job.

Large-scale junk removal and whole-property cleanouts address entire garages, workshops, basements, attics, sheds, barns, outbuildings, estates, and rental turnovers. Materials include household junk, furniture, appliances, and items accumulated over years of storage. Special items such as refrigerators, freezers, televisions, mattresses, and similar objects are handled under the cleanout scope. Optional property restoration steps such as grading, seeding, or new sod can follow the clearance when requested through related landscape services. Every job includes the two-man crew and dump truck, all labor with no requirement for property owner participation, access to stairs and tight spaces, furniture disassembly as needed, and final sweep-up.

The process begins when property owners submit photos of the material and area for assessment. Pricing can often be completed from the photos, or a team member may visit the property if more information is required. A written proposal outlining the scope is provided for approval before the job is scheduled. Additional items discovered on the day of work are priced separately and approved prior to loading. Travel within twenty miles of the Kirkville shop is included, and the same rates apply for evening or Saturday work. The company is fully insured, with workers? compensation coverage on every crew member.

"Debris hauling and removal supports site preparation by clearing materials that would otherwise interfere with grading, excavation, or hardscape installation," said Jared Van Der Veer, owner of Summit Scapes Construction. "The dump truck capacity and optional equipment allow crews to move both light yard debris and heavier construction materials in fewer trips."

Certain materials are not accepted. These include chemicals, solvents, paint, oils, asbestos, storage and oil drums, oil and waste storage tanks, propane and pressurized cylinders, medical waste, needles, and biohazards. Excessively large items may also be declined after review. Infested items involving rodents or insects require containment measures and proof of prior insect treatment before acceptance.

"Whole-property cleanouts give owners a single crew that handles loading from basements, attics, and outbuildings through to final disposal and sweep-up," said Van Der Veer. "This approach keeps the focus on clearing the space so that subsequent landscape or hardscape work can proceed on a prepared site."
