

Woodlawn Tree Service Marks 35 Years of Professional Tree Care Across Grant County

November 24, 2026

CABINS, WV - November 24, 2026 -
Woodlawn Tree Service, a family-owned tree company and nursery based in Cabins, West Virginia, is marking more than 35 years of providing professional tree care services in Grant County to residents and property owners across northeastern West Virginia. The milestone reflects decades of work in tree pruning, health care, removal, and nursery services delivered by a team led by a Board Certified Master Arborist.

The company is owned by Matt, who works directly alongside his sons, Zachary and Toby. Together, the family has built a service centered on long-term tree health and sustainable planting practices. Over the course of more than three decades, the company has expanded its offerings to include tree consultation, diagnostic health care, and large-scale removal for trees that pose risks to people or property.

As a Board Certified Master Arborist, Matt oversees the company's approach to tree assessment and treatment. This credential represents the highest level of certification available in the field and requires extensive experience and continuing education. The designation informs the diagnostic and preventive care the company provides to clients managing both residential and commercial properties.

A central part of the operation is the company's tree nursery, where a variety of species are grown for planting projects throughout the region. The nursery allows the team to advise clients on tree selection based on local soil conditions, climate, and property requirements. Staff provide guidance on which species are most likely to thrive in a given environment before planting takes place.

"Reaching more than three decades in this work reflects the trust that clients across the region have placed in the team," said Matt, owner of Woodlawn Tree Service. "The focus has always been on the long-term health of trees, from the nursery stage through planting and ongoing maintenance."

The company has received consistent five-star feedback from clients who have cited its professionalism and technical knowledge. Reviews from the community can be found through the company's public listings. According to the company, this reputation has grown through word-of-mouth referrals and repeat work within the communities it serves.

"Each property presents different conditions, and the goal is to match the right care to the right situation," Matt added. "Whether a project involves pruning mature trees, treating disease, or selecting new plantings from the nursery, the approach begins with assessing the specific needs of the site."

Tree pruning remains among the most requested services, with the practice helping to protect trees against disease and pests while supporting their structure. Tree health care addresses diagnosis and treatment of conditions that affect vitality, and tree removal is handled for trees that are dead, diseased, or hazardous. These services are coordinated by the company's team, which draws on the expertise of its lead Arborist for complex assessments.

Woodlawn Tree Service continues to serve clients throughout West Virginia. The company operates as a full-service tree care provider and nursery, combining field work with ongoing consultation to support healthy tree populations across the region it serves.
