The Immortalitea Company Announces Official Launch Of Their White Mulberry Tea

February 10, 2017

February 10, 2017 -
The Immortalitea Company, a wellness company based in Grandville, Michigan, has announced a new addition to their premium products line. The company's white mulberry tea is now available through their website.

Margo Chupeido, a spokesperson for the company, says, "White mulberry leaves contain compounds that block sugar. These compounds are known as DNJs and these won't allow you to just eat sugar with no repercussions. But they definitely help you to add a dessert now and then without all of the guilt that typically comes along with consuming sugary foods."

Chupeido says that anyone with concerns about their blood sugar levels or their dietary sugar absorption might want to try the tea, which has been used in Chinese medicine for centuries. The company states that their white mulberries are harvested exclusively from young plants. Chupeido says that they maintain the quality of their mulberry tea by ensuring that plants never grow higher than 3.5 feet. Each time plants are harvested, the company leaves a large leaf for under growth which helps to keep the trees strong and healthy.

"This also ensures that only the youngest leaves, those on top, are used in our teas," says Chupeido.

For more than 10 years, The Immortalitea Company has worked with the Agriculture Ministry of Thailand and has trained local farmers on the steps needed to ensure the purest and most potent tea leaves are grown and harvested. The company states that their small business model means that they have the opportunity to harvest mulberry leaves several times per year, which leads to the provision of the freshest tea leaves possible to customers.

Chupeido states that improperly processed white mulberry leaves can be toxic to ingest and around 90 percent of the leaves currently grown in the world are used to feed livestock. She says that it is important for customers to realize that they need fresh, properly grown and harvested mulberry leaves in order to reap the benefits of this herbal product. Those interested in learning more about the benefits of white mulberry tea for sugar, blood pressure, and other health concerns can visit the company on their official website.
