

San Diego Landcaping Company Announces That It Is Open For Business

May 22, 2015

May 22, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A brand new landscape design San Diego company, Sandovals, has today launched its service. They have also launched their new website, which has been created by working together with Ninja Marketing. They hope that they will be able to help make San Diego, California, more beautiful through their landscaping efforts and that their new website will increase awareness across the area.

"We are a family owned business," says a representative from Sandovals. "We have worked with a variety of properties, from residential to commercial, for many years and are ready to take on any job. We are passionate about landscaping and believe our work is a form of art. As such, our work is more of a way of life than a job, and we believe this shines through in our results."

The new website highlights the various services that Sandovals offers. As can be seen on <http://www.sandovalslandscaping.com/>, these services include lawn maintenance, landscape lighting, full landscape design services, gardening & native plants, stump grinding, palm cleaning, low water plant selection, low water irrigation design, tree trimming or removal, sprinkler systems and any other type of garden work that homeowners may require. Additionally, the company offers free, no obligation estimates and is currently releasing special bonus coupons to celebrate the launch of the new website.

The website itself has been designed by Ninja Marketing, which has tried to create something that truly reflects the nature, vision and passion of the company itself. Indeed, the website feels almost like a tiki hut, full of wood, greens and other cheerful colors, without being overwhelming. They have also ensured that the website is easy to navigate for users.

"We wanted to make something simple, clean and beautiful, reflecting the work that Sandovals do," says John R. from Ninja Marketing. "While much of our work will be in relation to the marketing of the website and increasing brand awareness, creating a great website was a vital tool in achieving that."

While the website is, in the main, a method of attracting more people to consider the company for their landscaping needs, it also provides a number of very useful hints and tips for garden owners. For instance, a clear explanation on things that should be considered when designing a patio area has been included. Besides the actual design of the patio, the company also talks about plant selection and backyard design, which is all intricately linked together. Similarly, they have provided information on how to find the best possible lawn service.

"We want our customers to understand that we are truly passionate about gardening and landscaping," adds the Sandovals spokesperson. "Naturally, we hope that people see this and come to us, but we want them to do so because they understand that we truly are the best and have made that decision out of their own volition."

As a company, it is hoped that Sandovals will have many successes. San Diego is already a beautiful place, but they hope to be able to enhance this beauty even more.
