Fort Mayers, Florida: Big Sky Products LLC has released new information regarding the different ways in which technology products can be cleaned as a part of their technology cleaning awareness campaign.

While spring cleaning is considered a common practice for one's household, it is very important for technology products to be routinely cleaned as well since an accumulation of dust and bacteria on these surfaces can lead to several diseases as well as allergies in people.

According to Andrew Ried, a spokesperson for Big Sky Products, "Germ accumulation in commonly used items such as keyboards, monitors, and gaming equipment can lead to harmful consequences for people exposed to these surfaces. Using screen wipes to clean these products can be an effective way of keeping these germs at bay."

Cell phones can be cleaned using special cleaning kits that are specifically designed to clean electronic products. Even the commonly available alcohol wipes can be used for this purpose - all surfaces of the phone should be first disinfected to remove any bacteria and then cleaned with a dry cloth to make sure that the product doesn't stay wet.

For cleaning keyboards, the laptop or computer should be turned off and the board should be held upside down to remove any dust particles stuck inside the keys. The more stubborn dirt can be blown off using a can of compressed air. Screens for computers, laptops as well as tablets should be made smudge free using special screen cleaner wipes that are designed specifically for cleaning electronic surfaces.

The screen wipes should be able to act as a disinfectant while cleaning surfaces with leaving any streaks behind. Ideally, these wipes should work on a variety of surfaces including including smartphones, tablets, computers, laptop keyboards and monitors, TVs, smart watches, LCD and LED screens, and games equipment, as well as CDs, DVDs, phones, camera lenses, musical instruments, GPS devices, glasses, sunglasses, and more. Big Sky Products LLC has launched its own line of premium screen wipes that can be purchased at their official website as well as their Amazon storefront.
