The guide is available for free, and people can also receive free competition analysis if they contact Nathan Olnick.

"Start with the end in mind, success for the future results," says Nathan Olnick. "That is my catch phrase, and one that I apply to all the work that I do. In my new master guide, I introduce that concept to people and show them how they can make it work in their favor."

People are encouraged to start now on the information provided in the guide. It is a 44 page guide that is set up to be easy to use, and that clearly shows how the different elements of local SEO tie in together and work in synergy with each other. Olnick discusses various issues, such as Google+, Trust, Authority, and Quality Content, as well as a myriad of other, smaller activities, and how these all link together in terms of creating an online domination strategy on the local level.

In the guide, Olnick also goes into greater detail about what online SEO is and why it matters. He goes on to explain how the algorithms that are important for local SEO have changed over the years, and what this means in terms of digital actions. "Essentially, I have built 20 pointers that people should implement if they want to truly blow the competition out of the water," he adds. "I then go on to describe citations, list building, and much more, in an effort to show people exactly how they can dominate their market through localized SEO."

Those who are interested are encouraged to contact Nathan Olnick SEO expert as soon as possible for further information on local SEO strategies and how these can benefit their business.
