For Las Vegas, NV company Rip Toned Fitness, the ultimate aim is to provide people all over the world with tools and accessories to maximize their workout. They have developed weightlifting straps that quickly took the domestic market by storm. They are proud to announce that they have now made them available to the British market through the Amazon.co.uk marketplace. Almost instantly, the wrist straps started to receive positive reviews.

Rip Toned Fitness spokesperson Mark Pasay says: "Our product has been named best in class by various fitness experts and companies, and we want to make sure that everyone can benefit from them. Hence, we have decided to launch them in a variety of countries in Europe, including the British market. We're very happy to see that they are already so well-received."

People who have tried the straps have been very happy with how they have been able to enhance their overall fitness performance, and how these have helped to reduce pain. "I have very slim wrists for a guy and they appear to be my weak point. I used the wrist wraps last night for the first time and pushed out 48 front squats with 40kg and ordinarily I would have to stop because of my wrists being painful. Last night with the wraps it was totally different...," says an Amazon customer. Another customer has used the straps to help reduce the pain associated with arthritis.

Rip Toned Fitness is committed to ensuring that people all over the world can become fit and healthy. They intend to release further products in a variety of other markets over the next few weeks and months.

To ensure that the British public is fully aware of how to properly use the straps, the company has also created a YouTube video that explains how to wear wrist wraps. This video also guides people on how to choose the stiffness that is right for their personal workout and their fitness goals. Pasay adds: "We are committed to excellent customer service and we want to make sure that people know exactly what to get and how to use it. The YouTube video clearly explains this."
