December 04, 2017 -
Niko Enterprises Limited, a business in Milton Keynes, United Kingdom, has announced the launch of their new copper infused compression gloves to help relieve pain in fingers, hands and wrists. The gloves are currently available on Amazon, where they have already gathered a lot of positive attention. Specifically, the particular features of the compression gloves are making this product stand out.

Pam Bhara from Niko Enterprises Limited says: "We are very proud of and happy with these copper infused compression gloves. Copper has been observed to have numerous health benefits, particularly in relation to circulation and the cardiovascular system. We're happy to see that so many people are enjoying the benefits."

The copper infused compression gloves are made of an 88% copper infused nylon material. It meets all the relevant international standards and has been designed to ensure that joints remain at the optimal temperature. This has been found to help increase people's mobility and reduce pain and tension caused by various conditions, such as tendonitis or RSI, carpal tunnel, and arthritis.

The gloves feature an ergonomic rubber grip on the palm. It also has a fingerless design, which ensures that people can continue to have optimum grip. The fabric, meanwhile, is breathable and doesn't itch. Rather, it feels like a second skin. Pam Bhara adds: "We have also used a full odor free fabric, designed to wick away any moisture. The antimicrobial properties, which are part of the copper, make sure that you don't get soggy or sweaty palms. Rather, your hands will always feel clean and dry."

The key feature of the glove, however, is the compression that it provides. This ensures that people can return to their regular activities without constantly being bothered by pain and discomfort. Meanwhile, the copper comes in direct contact with the skin, which helps people to recover from any joint issues that they may have. Additionally, they have been constructed to last a lifetime, ensuring that people will never have to purchase another pair. It is also for this reason that the gloves are already listed as the best copper infused compression gloves currently available on Amazon.
