There are three types of service which can be arranged: Partial Pool Removal, Full Pool Removal, and Demolition. Each type of service is accomplished with the expertise, knowledge, and professionalism that is the hallmark of the company. Pool removal is a service that is growing in popularity among homeowners.

There are several reasons why homeowners might choose local Annapolis pool removal services. A major reason is the cost of a pool on the property. There are added insurance costs, as well as the price of upkeep, chemicals and other equipment such as filters and pumps. When the costs add up, the benefits from using the pool may not outweigh the dollars-and-cents amounts. Another significant reason for pool removal is the safety issue. Pools are sometimes considered an attractive nuisance and children are drawn to a pool, not realizing the danger.

Baltimore pool demolition contractors specialize in pool removal. They do not do other types of construction, excavation or contracting. They have the necessary specialized equipment that allows for pool removal efficiently, with the least impact on lawns, driveways, and other landscaping elements.

Homeowners may choose partial pool removal, which is the least costly approach. Any concrete is removed and the balance of the space occupied by the pool is filled with gravel and soil. A full removal of the swimming pool breaks up the entire structure and removes it. The demolition specialists pump out any existing water from the pool. The pool is then removed and the gap filled. The area is then replanted with grass. All work is completed with the least possible disruption to the daily schedule of the homeowner.
