ILLUMINEX Inc., a company based in Denver, Colorado, has announced the launch of a new website. The company states that this latest site is separate and distinct from its main corporate website and is dedicated completely to LED Grow Lights and related accessories.

Dennis Gronbeck with ILLUMINEX says, "We've designed the new site to offer ease of navigation and to provide our viewers with an overview of all of our quality products. You can also learn more about us and the products we supply."

The site offers information about all of the company's grow lights, grow tents, and similar products. ILLUMINEX has more than six years of experience in LED commercial and industrial lighting and states that they understand what is needed to provide performance-based results in grow lighting.

In addition to a listing of products on the new site, which can be accessed at <https://illuminexgrowlights.com/led-grow-lights-shop/>, the company gives an overview of their products and why they are superior to others in the industry.

"Testing of the LED grow lights has shown outstanding results," says Gronbeck. "We've designed all of our LED grow lighting products to offer energy savings as well as performance benefits."

Gronbeck says that LED lighting has been shown to have a fraction of the heat of other lamps, and that the energy savings and affordability are unsurpassed with regards to grow lighting. The company offers the Mars and Mars Pro series of grow lighting, as well as a number of grow tents.

The new site has also been set up so that viewers can request a free quote for any system that they require. It also offers various means of contact for commercial clients. Gronbeck says that breaking away from the corporate site to offer a website more dedicated to grow lighting was a decision long in the making. He states that the company felt that customers would benefit more from a separate website to detail the information regarding LED grow lighting and accessories, and says that they hope customers find it much more beneficial than searching through the corporate site for the information they require.
