Wholeness Home, a home and garden company based in Pasadena, California has announced the launch of their Fancy Christmas Gift Tags with Gold String in the Amazon Marketplace. Wholeness Home is known for providing a wide array of items for the home, including Kitchen and Baking tools as well as novelty items.

The Christmas Gift Tags are their first seasonal offerings. Annie French, of Wholeness Home, explains that the company has been looking for manufacturers to produce high end, but reasonably priced tags for the past two years. She says, "Many of us love to spend time wrapping our gifts and making them look beautiful on the outside as we know they will be prominently displayed in the homes of our friends under their tree. So often all the attention goes into the wrapping and not into the to/from tags we attached to them. We wanted our tags to have gold string, that can be tied to a bow, would fit easily over a wine bottle or be attached to a special gift bag."

The Christmas gift tags come in 16 different styles, from snowmen, ornaments and jingle bells to Christmas trees and a variety of Santas. There are 8 cards in each style for a total of 128 separate tags. The tags come in a carrying case that can hang on the wall or fold down to one quarter its size for easy storage for the ones saved for next year. They are decorated with light glitter so they will shimmer in the lights under a Christmas tree and each has a golden string. The tags also include a variety of colors for those who like to color coordinate their gift wrap and tags. With this much assortment and so many tags in the set, it may well be the only gift card tag purchase one needs this season.

They are currently only available in the Amazon marketplace. They will be available on Thanksgiving Day and Ms. French expects that due to the limited quantity they will sell out quickly. For more information on Wholeness Home, visit www.wholenesshome.com.
