July 31, 2018 -

Dayton, Wash. - Express Employment Professionals is proud to detail their impressive year during 2018, its 35th year of business. As a whole, Express has seen an overall increase in interest from clients and associates and is on track to put a million people to work. Although 2018 has been a milestone year for the agency, a local provider of employment in Dayton, WA, is still looking forward to the rest of 2018 to further their successes.

Express Employment Professionals has opened 26 franchise locations this year alone, and their 800th office has just officially opened in Central Calgary, Alberta, Canada. Express has always had an impact on local communities by decreasing the unemployment rate and helping qualified people find work. However, the basic act of putting food on the table of community members is an aspect of the business that is imperative to Express's expanding value.

When individuals are searching for jobs hiring in Walla Walla, Express Employment Professionals has opened their doors to help. Just this year, they have put over 300,000 individuals into the workforce. They have an expansive list of 19,000 job openings from administrative assistants to welders, and they cover nearly every field of work, which gives individuals the opportunity to start working towards the careers they love.

"Express continues to outperform the competition by impacting communities on every level," said Shannon Bergevin, Owner of the Express Walla Walla Office. "We are committed to connecting quality workers with reputable companies, helping put food on the table for families and generating revenue to boost local economies. In an era of increasing automation during the job search, we are committed to preserving the human element of recruiting."

The office's success and accomplishments have not gone unnoticed. For the 7th consecutive year, Entrepreneur Magazine has named Express the No. 1 staffing franchise in the U.S. The business has also made it to the top 100 on the "Annual Franchise 500 List", which ranks companies on overall success and growth. Express Employment Professionals has proven to be an agency that not only has a deserved reputation for professionalism and corporate success but a commitment to the community and economy alike.
