Lynchburg, VA based Tanner Henvey Photography (THP) is pleased to announce that they now offer real estate photography services to help homeowners and real estate agents secure successful sales and rentals of properties in Lynchburg and the surrounding areas.

?Selling or renting a property is not an easy task to accomplish? that?s why the majority of real estate agents invest a lot of money in advertising fees. Fortunately, with the advent of social media and digital marketing, professional real estate photography became one of the most cost-effective tools in showcasing the assets of a property, and attracting a steady stream of potential tenants or buyers,? says Tanner Henvey, owner of THP.

As noted on the company?s website, at https://tannerhenvey.com/real-estate, real estate photography primarily entices clients to come and view the property in person. Henvey also points out that buyers will want to go through every single photo of an estate, so it is only imperative to use high definition pictures to allow them to virtually inspect the facilities and influence them to go for a personal property viewing. ?Real estate photography is an effective way of selling a property by means of showcasing its features in a manner that appeals to your potential clients. Buyers negotiate against themselves if they rule out a home for lack of quality pictures; that?s why it?s crucial to use high definition photos to attract attention, interest, desire, and action,? he said.

Meanwhile, a recent study concluded that home advertisements with quality photos sell 32% faster, and properties within the the $200,000-$1,000,000 range sell for $3,000-$11,000 more when they were listed together with quality photos. Furthermore, Henvey explains that digital images can professionally showcase a listing, and modern home buyers appreciate the convenience of doing a virtual tour since it lets them know what to expect once they decide to visit the property.

Henvey also points out the importance taking realistic photos that depict an accurate representation of the property that is being sold. ?The last thing you want to do is set a buyer?s expectation of a perfect home only for them to find out that you just used highly edited photos to make it look more appealing,? he said. Furthermore, he also highlights the importance of hiring an experienced photographer because they have the eye to present a property in its very best light, and they know all the angles that best demonstrate the natural flow of the house.
