Dallas TX: The Dallas Home Inspector team has been providing home and commercial inspections in the area for more than two decades. More than 6,000 inspections have been completed to date. The company is the top source for both buyers and sellers throughout the entire Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex. The professionals are trusted with the best inspections possible. DHI is a reliable professional engineering firm which specializes in home and building inspection services. They have been operating in the DFW Metroplex for more than twenty years. More than six thousand commercial and residential inspections to date.

A spokesperson for the company explains, "We are experts in our field, and provide superior inspection and engineering services at competitive rates. Our goal is to be your advocate in making sure your property is built to last. We will provide you with professional reports including photos and videos. You will be fully informed and educated on the condition of the property so you can make intelligent decisions regarding purchasing, repairs and maintenance of the property."

The reports provided by the inspectors utilize the standards and regulations set by the most recent International Residential Code, as well as the National Association of Home Builders. These specifications are a higher quality inspection than those which rely simply on city code inspectors. This policy ensures the safety and energy efficiency of the client's property.

The inspectors are able to prepare several different types of inspections. These include End of Builder Warranty Inspection, Pre-Existing Home Inspection, Seller Inspection, Buyer Inspection and Energy Audit. A major reason for conducting an inspection is financial. Identifying problems which will be covered under the warranty can save thousands in repairs. A buyer's inspection allows the buyer to fine tune the purchase offer to avoid being surprised by repair costs after closing. Energy audits can identify where there are unnecessary expenses caused by energy issues.
