Bariatric Mexico Surgery, a company in Tijuana, Mexico, that provides advice to people who are considering bariatric surgery, has recently become aware of new myths, rumors, untruths, and other misconceptions in relation to bariatric surgery. To address these and make people more aware about the realities surrounding the procedure, they have released a new blog post. The post, entitled 'Bariatric Surgery Misconceptions', can be accessed through their website at <http://www.bariatricmexicosurgery.com/>.

Alma Orozco from Bariatric Mexico Surgery says: "Whenever something becomes commonplace in the world, just like bariatric surgery, there seems to be a rise in the number of misconceptions as well. It is important to remember that this procedure, while an invasive medical solution, is designed to save lives. What these misconceptions do is potentially threaten lives because they can discourage people from having the procedure done for them. This is why we felt the time was right to put some of the rumors to rest and show what bariatric surgery is really about."

In the blog post, the company addresses all of the most common myths. These include the belief that most people put the weight back on eventually, that the risks of the surgery are higher than those associated with being obese, and that the surgery is effectively the 'easy option'. Each of these misconceptions are completely untrue, and Bariatric Surgery Mexico has taken the time to highlight exactly what the truth is.

"The idea that bariatric surgery is a cop out really baffles us," adds Alma Orozco. "People who are obese are dealing with a number of health issues, some of them life threatening, and having bariatric surgery has the potential to save their lives. It requires a great deal of dedication on their part, and they have to turn their entire lifestyle around. That isn't a cop out, it is downright brave."

Bariatric Surgery Mexico encourages everyone to view their website if they are interested in having this type of surgery completed in Mexico. Additionally, should they hear of further opinions about this type of procedure, they are encouraged to contact the company so that they can confirm whether or not they are true.
