June 29, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Kimyatta Vinson, spokesperson for the company LCG, Inc., has announced that their Raw African Cocoa Butter benefits skin health according to recent studies. The company said that their product is good to use on the lips, face, elbows, knees, hands and feet.

The Raw African Cocoa Butter by LCG is 100% pure and packaged in a container that holds 16 ounces of the product. The company stated that there was no chemical processing involved in the development of their Cocoa butter, which makes it perfect for all skin care needs. Customers can apply generous amounts of the African cocoa butter to the skin after taking a bath or shower. This will leave them with a classical light yet fresh scent of the product.

"The reason why we feel that our Raw 100% Pure African Cocoa Butter benefits the skin greatly is because it is full of antioxidants. These help to fight off free radicals, which are the cause of skin stresses and is one of the culprits that makes the skin show signs of aging", said Kimyatta. The company added that many pregnant women in the world have claimed that regular use of their Cocoa butter is helping to keep their stretch marks away. However, LCG reminds customers that they cannot guarantee this benefit.

Kimyatta also made the following statement: "Many people that have sensitive skin are always on the lookout for a product that can help reduce skin irritations such as eczema and dermatitis. This can be a very frustrating problem for them, and finding the right product is equally frustrating, because while so many promise amazing results, they don't always deliver. We don't make any guarantees that cocoa butter is able to prevent any of these conditions 100%, but what we can say is that others who suffer with these conditions and have used cocoa butter on their skin have found it to help them to reduce these problems quite considerably."

The Raw African Cocoa Butter by LCG, Inc. is currently being sold on their Amazon storefront. The company stated that they have chosen Amazon to sell and fulfill their product because of the great customer service that this powerhouse e-commerce platform is well known for. They added that customers don't only deserve a high quality product; they deserve high quality customer service as well. Kimyatta urges all customers who buy the African cocoa butter to please leave an honest and unbiased review on their Amazon storefront. Many customers depend highly on the feedback of others who have bought the product in order to help them make their final purchasing decision.

LCG, Inc. said that their main priority is always their customers. And to ensure their customers' satisfaction, they will consistently do their best to provide them with high quality products and an excellent buying experience.
