Remove A Pool, a company that removes swimming pools in Dallas, Texas, has announced that they?re taking all precautions needed to avoid Covid 19 by ensuring that all of their workers are stepping up washing and sanitizing while working on properties. The company offers their services to homeowners who have an unwanted swimming pool in their backyard. With heightened concerns about Covid 19, they want to assure homeowners that when they do their job of removing a pool, all of their workers will take the necessary precautions to avoid being exposed to the virus. The workers will be carefully washing their hands and sanitizing everything that may have the virus.

S. Gordon, a spokesperson for Remove A Pool, says, ?If you are concerned about Covid 19, there?s no need to worry about it when we go to your home to remove an unwanted swimming pool in your backyard. Not only are we a fully bonded, insured, and licensed demolition contractor, we are also compliant with all health regulations and that includes taking the necessary precautions to avoid Covid 19.?

Remove A Pool has a dedicated and highly trained crew who approach every project with great skill and careful attention to detail. They have expertise in various areas, including filling, permits, landscape clean up, and more. They want to point out that there are many advantages of removing a pool using the services of a professional pool demolition service. These include being able to reclaim the space; reduction of the liability risks that pools present particularly for homeowners with kids and pets that cannot swim; improvement in the value of the home; and being able to avoid the usual repair and maintenance costs of swimming pools.

The Dallas pool removal company offers comprehensive services for the removal of a swimming pool in the Dallas-Fort Worth Metropolitan Area. These services include: obtaining all of the county demolition permits, arranging for the testing of the soil, and coordinating with county inspectors; contacting the utility providers for the home to locate any buried lines on the property that might be accidentally damaged when they do the necessary work; disconnection of the water, gas, and electrical services to the pool; siphoning of all the water out of the pool for display in a manner that is considered to be safe and environmentally friendly; demolition of the pool using safe and effective techniques that minimize the risk of damaging the fence, landscaping, and neighboring properties; sorting of recyclable materials and getting rid of all debris from the backyard; filling the void left by the removal of the pool with a clean mix of aggregates; and planting of fresh grass seed over the project site when requested.

Partial pool removal is also offered by Remove A Pool. This is a simple and more affordable approach to pool removal. The technique is to simply remove the top concrete parts of the swimming pool and then filling the rest of the pool area with soil and gravel. The equipment used by Remove A Pool have been specially designed to ensure minimal damage to the lawn and landscaping.

For the full removal service, rather than simply getting rid of the top few feet of concrete, the entire structure is broken up and then removed. Nevertheless, they will still use their specially designed equipment that allows them to be minimally invasive to the home?s lawn and landscaping. They will be using different pool removal procedures depending on the type of the swimming pool, whether it is a vinyl lined pool, gunite pool, or a fiberglass pool.
