LETHBRIDGE, AB - Mark Holthe, a business immigration lawyer from Holthe Tilleman, is launching a new website where he will release his podcast, which focuses on Canadian immigration. Holthe's expertise includes assisting large national and multinational companies in the navigation of the complex world of Canadian immigration law. He has been making such podcasts on his professional/corporate lawyer site but now he intends to migrate these podcasts to the new website.

As one of the top Canadian immigration lawyers based in Alberta, Holthe has successfully helped hundreds of international and domestic companies recruit and retain skilled and semi-skilled personnel from overseas. These companies were mostly in the oil and gas industry, and have developed strategic plans for sourcing large volumes of foreign nationals through Holthe's help. "As a result of my prior experience as an immigration officer, I have been able to enhance the services I offer to my cross-border and overseas clients," says Holthe. "In addition, the experience I have gathered as an immigration lawyer enabled me to acquire all the knowledge required to advise the public needing information on immigration, and this pushed me to create podcasts for everyone to take advantage of."

With the podcast, Holthe aims to widen his reach to the public through an accessible platform. His podcast will focus on discussing relevant immigration issues, as well as answering queries from foreign nationals who are interested in pursuing employment in Canada, HR managers, and Canadian citizens who are looking to sponsor spouses from abroad. The podcast also aims to provide a Canadian immigration guide that simplifies the process of understanding immigration laws, practices, and policies.

The Canadian Immigration Podcast will also be available on iTunes. Subscribers can expect in-depth discussions from Holthe and future guests that will cover the grounds on Canadian immigration. As of this writing, Holthe is accepting immigration-related questions from interested individuals via his website. These individuals can visit Holthe's website and access a widget that will allow them to leave a voice message. The immigration lawyer is currently in the process of gathering the most relevant and most asked questions from the public and answer them directly on his podcast.
