Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. in Columbus GA has announced that they are offering their help to people who have been hurt as a result of someone?s negligence. They know that those who have been hurt are usually under a lot of stress and anxiety because of the high medical expenses, missed time from work, and the pain and suffering from the injuries. They may be tempted to simply accept what is offered by the insurance company but it is actually a much better idea to consult first with a personal injury lawyer.

Tim Derrickson, a spokesperson for Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C., says, ?Our law firm will not let you accept a lowball offer. We have a team of experienced attorneys and outside experts who will take a look at your case and value it for what it is worth. We will then tell the insurance company what you will accept to settle your claims. The insurance adjuster?s only goal is to make money for the insurance company. Your well-being is not their concern, and their settlement offers will usually be far less than the value of your claim.?

There are several types of personal injury cases that the law firm of Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. can handle.

These include car accidents, bicycle accidents, slip and fall accidents, workplace accidents, defective products, medical malpractice, dog bites, nursing home abuse, construction accidents, and premises liability.

The firm can provide victims of automobile accidents with a personal injury lawyer Columbus GA residents can depend on. Whether the victim had been hurt in a car accident, 18-wheeler or tractor-trailer crash, commercial vehicle crash, bus accident, motorcycle or moped crash, or pedestrian accident, the person injury attorney has sufficient knowledge about such accidents and truly understand the damage that can result. They will legally pursue all possible compensation from the insurance policies for the client?s claim. And in case the at-fault driver does not have sufficient insurance coverage to compensate the victim, they will file a claim against uninsured or underinsured motorist policies to make sure the client gets the full compensation.

With regards to bicycle accidents, these are usually caused by drivers who are distracted or negligent. A primary cause of such accidents is failure to yield to the right of way. Many car drivers become impatient with bicyclists and as a result, they engage in risky behaviors, such as improper passing. Once again, these are cases where a personal injury lawyer can help the victim get the proper compensation for medical costs and lost wages, including the pain and suffering resulting from the negligence of another person.

Meanwhile, slip and fall accidents are quite common. These accidents usually occur when a property owner does not sufficiently maintain or monitor conditions on the property. The result is the presence of slippery floors and uneven surfaces that increase the possibility of slip and fall accidents, particularly for visitors. Victims of such accidents will need to document the scene of the accident as much as possible, get medical treatment promptly, and should never talk with a business representative or insurance adjuster until they have consulted with a personal injury lawyer.

With regards to workplace accidents, these are also common occurrences, especially for workplaces where safety practices are not followed or given priority. The workers? compensation laws in the state of Georgia provide coverage for such kind of injuries. In most cases, this will allow the worker to recover medical expenses and lost time wages. In some cases, workers may also be able to file a personal injury claim and seek additional damages for the pain and suffering. The personal injury lawyer can help with such claims, which can be brought against third parties, such as co-workers, who had intentionally or negligently caused the injury.
