Seattle, Wa.- The coronavirus (COVID-19) is hitting the world hard. Thankfully, large companies like Amazon are doing what they can to help their Seattle community and the small businesses inside of it such as Northwest Trophy and Awards. Northwest Trophy and Awards is a Seattle WA award shop thankful for those willing to help the community. Amazon has stepped up to provide multiple resources for Seattle amid COVID-19.

Starting with the front lines, Amazon has committed to donating $5 million dollars? worth of their devices. Amazon has also provided $10 million dollars in funding for local Seattle businesses, that will likely impact small stores such as Northwest Trophy and Awards. Small businesses in the area with less than 50 workers and $7 million in annual revenue can apply for aid on the Amazon website.

With federal funding delayed Northwest Trophy and Awards understands how important grants like this can be for the life of small businesses such as itself. Amazon is not the only large organization doing thier part to help small businesses. Small businesses looking for grants can also look to companies such as Verizon and Facebook for opportunities. Northwest Trophy and Awards is a small business in Seattle and thankful for the dedication of Amazon and other companies to assist during this difficult time.

Small businesses are finding new and creative ways to keep their doors open. Northwest Trophy and Awards offers engraving in Seattle, WA and is offering modified pick up and ordering due to COVID-19 as a creative way to still other their services and maintain social distancing.
