Las Vegas, Nevada based fitness products company, Rip Toned Fitness, recently announced that they were launching their popular elbow sleeves onto the Amazon marketplace in Canada. Since the launch, the company states that they have gained a large number of positive reviews from Canadian customers.

"This is one of the most popular elbow sleeves in the United States," says Mark Pasay, a representative for the company. "It has now become one of the most popular in Canada as well."

Pasay says that Rip Toned does not only offer top notch products like the elbow sleeves but also provides web content and video tutorials to help those working out to make sure that they are properly using the sleeves. He also states that the inclusion of free web content and tutorials is one reason the company believes that the sleeves have become so popular.

"You want to know that you are properly using your workout gear in order to avoid injury," says Pasay. "You also want to know that you are getting the most from your workout. By including those tutorials and content, we aim to help our customers to gain the most from lifting and to avoid common injuries that can come along with it."

Pasay says that the sleeves are not just available on the Amazon Canada marketplace. They have also been released in other countries, including Italy and France. He states that the company's goal is to provide their quality lifting and workout gear to anyone who wants to get fit, no matter where they live. Rip Toned Fitness also previously launched other products in Canada, Germany, Spain and various other countries. They plan to continue to launch products in these additional areas as long as their customers keep making them such a popular choice for workout gear.

Those interested can learn more about the products by Rip Toned Fitness by visiting them on their official website or their Amazon seller's page. Those in Canada can now view the products on Amazon.ca and read through the various positive reviews that the elbow sleeves have gained since their initial launch.
