September 16, 2015 -
Rooter Hero Plumbing of Ventura County wants to set the record straight and dispel a number of common plumbing myths that many of their customers erroneously believe are the truth. The Moorpark, CA-based plumbing company offers both commercial and residential plumbing services and, during their work, they come across a number of very common misconceptions when speaking with customers. They feel it is time to set the record straight and address some of these issues directly.

"There is so much misinformation out there when it comes to plumbing," says Jessica Perrault from Rooter Hero Plumbing. "The biggest one is that plumbing repair is incredibly expensive. We pride ourselves on offering some of the highest quality services at the lowest possible prices. However, other myths are slightly more serious and a bit more difficult to work out. Hence, we felt that it was time to reveal what the truth actually is."

Erroneous information that is out there on the Internet and being touted as truth, can affect the operation and integrity of residential plumbing systems. Not only can believing plumbing myths cause significant damage to plumbing components such as water pipes, sewer lines, and water heaters, but customers may end up spending thousands of dollars to correct what may have started out as a small problem.

"With so much information on the Internet, it can be hard to separate fact from fiction," adds Jessica Perrault. "When homeowners have a plumbing concern, it's always the better option to contact a local, trained plumber with their questions. We make this easy by including a contact form on our website that customers can use to ask us a direct question and get honest, reliable, and professional answers in regards to solutions." Visitors to the Rooter Hero Plumbing website can find this contact form at http://rooterhero.com/ventura-county.

Rooter Hero Plumbing encourages anyone with questions related to kitchen, bathroom, or other plumbing problems to make sure the information they are receiving is from a reliable source to avoid significant, costly expenses in the future.
