Daryl Shankland has been guiding clients in their investment decisions since 1980, encompassing both good times and bad. Her broadcasting background has helped her communicate complex, quickly changing information to clients in a manner that they can understand. Daryl has been a frequent commentator on financial matters on both television and radio. She served as branch manager of the Quincy, Illinois Smith Barney branch for many years before leaving to start her own firm. With her deep experience in management and client portfolio structuring, she understands how emotions can take their toll and how critical it is to trust one's financial advisor.

As an Accountant and a graduate of the College of Financial Planning in Denver, Colorado, Buddy Nidey applies his strong analytical skill to his work as an investment advisor representative. He enjoys coordinating clients' investment portfolios with solid financial planning that takes income taxes, diversification and safety into consideration. Bud also assists clients with income tax preparation, health, life and long term care insurance as part of his financial consulting services.

Together, Daryl and Buddy work to educate their nearby communities with outreach on various topics of financial literacy. They conduct frequent workshops on Social Security Maximization, Taxes in Retirement, and Retirement Income Planning in public venues and for area businesses. They are both members of the Society for Financial Awareness, a not for profit organization dedicated to financial education.
