The company?s website has a calendar widget to check availability. Once the customer selects the day that works for them, the form asks them to select a start time. Once a start time is selected, the form allows the customer to select an end time for the same day, a multi-day event, or an overnight event. Then the customer can proceed to select the equipment that they need from the website?s high-quality portfolio of party rentals.

The company also offers a customer pick-up option for those who are comfortable with picking and setting up the equipment themselves. In case the customers need delivery, the company charges a nominal delivery fee. It also claims to provide discounts and package deals when the customer rents out multiple items. The company also rents out generators in case the occasion is being celebrated at a park or other open areas that do not have a power outlet for the blower that is needed to keep the unit inflated at all times.
