

Adam Elements iPhone Flash Drive Featured on Amazon Deal of the Day

February 23, 2018

February 23, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

ADAM elements, a Taiwanese company focused on electronic smart products, will be featured on Amazon's Deal of the Day on February 24th at a large discount for a short period of time, or until supplies last with their newly launched iKlips II iPhone flash drive. Offered in both red and grey, with sizes of 32GB, 64GB and 128GB, this OTG device is currently one of the most advanced flash memory storage devices currently available on today's market.

The iKlips II is an upgraded model of the iKlips which was awarded the Reddot Design Award in 2015. Unlike the first iKlips, one of the features of this model is an extended connector that doesn't require users to take their protective shell off their phone.

The iKlips II is also compatible with current iPhone models including both the iPhone 8 and X, and allows users to take photos and store them directly on the external memory without taking any space on their phone. It is also able to take 4k streaming video.

The flash drive and app work well together and normal transfers are very quick. The end caps protecting the flash drive are very nice too,? a customer commented. ?Creating a design that customers would absolutely love was our main goal,? an Adam representative said. ?We are glad to see all the positive feedback from our customers,? he added.

The iKlips II is MFi certified and licensed by Apple for quality standards and reliability and in the United States, available exclusively on Amazon.com.
