August 07, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Adam Elements, a manufacturer of innovative smart products, announced the availability of their CASA Hub eC301. This docking station offers connectivity for the newest USB Type-C devices. The hub provides two USB 3.1 Type-A ports and an Ethernet port connection. It's compatible with Mac OS, Windows XP/7/8/10, Linux, HP, Lenovo, Asus, Acer, Dell, and Chromebook.

CASA Hub eC301 connects to Type-C ports on laptops and transfers data, media, and power via its USB-A ports. It also offers a much faster and stable connection to the internet as it features connection to a wired Ethernet. Its high-speed gigabit ethernet is compatible with IEEE 802.3. It switches automatically among 10, 100, or 1,000Mbps speeds to ensure a better bandwidth connection.

The hub's high-performance chipset, Thunderbolt 3 compatibility, and USB functions require no extra driver installation or tweaking to use. It has a simple plug-and-play design to maximize usage. The USB-C LAN adapter hub eC301 provides up to 5 Gbps of data transfer rate and availability to join a wired network via the Gigabit Ethernet port.

CASA Hub eC301 is a solid aluminum hub that has a strengthened connector and a nylon braided cable that lasts long. Adam Elements offers a three-year warranty in case users encounter a connectivity problem. It is available on Amazon.com in silver, gold, rose gold and grey.
