September 25, 2018

Alvin, Texas - September 25, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

With the recent public scare of feral hogs running wild in the Riverstone community of Sugar Land Texas, The Critter Squad Inc. has been fielding calls from concerned residents looking for hog control solutions. This is all in the wake of the recent local story that aired regarding the feral hog damages taking place throughout the community and outlining the challenges that come along with removal options.

With Riverstone residents reporting that the HOA has been unwilling to provide hog removal solutions, some residents are seemingly looking to take the matter into their own hands by inquiring about personally hiring a feral hog removal expert to come and stop this feral hog issue from getting bigger than it currently is.

With the recent need for hog removal, The Critter Squad Inc. announced the launch of their new feral hog control service, which is set to go live Oct. 2018 for any residents or homeowners that are looking to contribute in minimizing the hog populations that reside in the Riverstone community. It is currently estimated that there are approximately 4 million feral hogs just in the state of Texas alone, a number that is quickly increasing year after year.

When speaking to James Catchings, owner of The Critter Squad Inc., this is what he had to share on the matter: "Removing hogs from sensitive areas such as urban neighborhoods require special equipment, training, and safety precautions to be implemented to protect the community, as well as the individual removing the nuisance hogs. Hogs reproduce at an alarming rate and despite drastic measures taken to control growth, their numbers continue to rise causing tremendous damage throughout Fort Bend County."

Even to the layperson, baited traps for hogs presents some glaring concerns. The most obvious being that bait and food can draw more hogs to the area, creating a larger feral hog population. On the other side of that, doing nothing at all is also a sure means of both damages and hog numbers growing at an alarming rate.

James continues, "Where you'll see most Sugar Land wildlife control companies out there doing the same old thing with baiting hogs into traps, it doesn't mean this is the only solution that exists. We are offering these services because we believe no response, based on uninformed assumptions, will only result in more hogs and damages across the community. Ultimately this is going to be a huge benefit to Fort Bend County residents because it will eliminate the costly damages that will only continue to grow as the hog populations grow."

The Owner at The Critter Squad Inc., James Catchings, makes a point of saying, "industry changes will be made when our approach to feral hog control launches for the residents of Sugar Land Texas".

Currently, the most common solution for feral hog control services are companies that offer hog removal with baited traps, but The Critter Squad Inc has improved upon this process, by refining the process to alternate means of removing problematic feral hogs in sensitive environments.
