Your Local HVAC Inc. states that they are available to assist customers around the clock, 24 hours a day and seven days a week for all of their air conditioning and heating needs. The company states that they only hire service technicians that are licensed, insured and certified. Stevens says that all of their service technicians are educated and experienced in their fields and have submitted to and passed all background and drug tests prior to employment. The company provides air conditioner installation and maintenance for residential, commercial and industrial clients. The company has more than 20 years of experience in the heating and cooling industry and provides top quality products and services to the Houston Metro area.

Stevens says that customers should always entrust the care of their air conditioning and heating units only to trustworthy, experienced and dependable technicians. He states that customers can contact them at any time to get an estimate for installation or repairs or to set up their tune up to get their system ready for fall, winter, spring, or summer. He says that customers should ensure that the company that they are working with is licensed to operate and offer services in that particular location. He states that all customers will receive an individualized recommendation for their new unit if a new unit is needed, and that the technicians will take into account the family's needs, their home or business size and other aspects to ensure that the right unit is chosen.

Stevens says that at some point, all air conditioning and heating units will need to be replaced, but stresses that with proper maintenance, those units can last for many years. He says that customers who have not had their HVAC units inspected and tuned up in the past few years are long overdue for a service.
