These include the home financing that is supported by the US Federal Housing Administration (FHA), the home program offered by the US Department of Veterans Affairs (VA), and other available real estate financing providers. The FHA home financing program is often a good choice for home buyers, especially first time home buyers, because the FHA financing contract is insured by the federal government. This allows the financing providers to offer a lower minimum down payment in contrast to the conventional home financing providers. And with regards to the VA home program, although it is only available to servicemen and veterans and their eligible spouses, it offers low interest rates, better terms, and minimal down payment. VA provides a home financing guaranty and other housing-related programs to assist people in purchasing, repairing, building, retaining, or adapting a house for personal occupancy.
