Mission To Market, a digital marketing agency in Carmel, Indiana that is absorbing MasterMind Digital Branding Solutions has announced that it is opening its doors to addiction treatment centers looking to expand their marketing efforts. MasterMind Digital Branding Solutions, <https://mastermindseo.org> has been a leader in the lead generation space for detox and rehab centers for years.

Stephen Twomey, a spokesperson for the company says, "SEO & lead generation is not something that your business can ignore, even if you are in the rehab business. In fact, reaching the number one spot on Google Organic listings and in Google Maps as well as other search engines for addiction services can be difficult given there are so many rehab facilities in the world today. Even in your local area, it can be difficult to get attention to your facility. This is where we come in. We utilize our proprietary Google My Business platform that we built out in order to help drive more eyes to your listing on Google. With searches becoming more hyper-local, as far as targeting your exact coordinates, it is important to make your profile as relevant to the local searcher as possible."

Twomey says that the company offers specialized services that will help addiction centers to get attention from those who need them. He says that addiction marketing services need to be done in a distinct way and that drawing attention to a facility or their online presence can be difficult. He states that his company is experienced in providing marketing services to rehab clinics and similar facilities and that his team knows exactly what needs to be done in order to gain the attention that the facility needs.

Twomey says that through various strategies, including a website, blog, social media presence and content marketing, his company can help addiction facilities to reach people who need them. He says local companies or organizations need a strong online presence in order to reach their targeted audiences and states that his agency has the experience needed to help these businesses to reach their marketing goals.

"We know SEO & lead generation," Twomey continues. "SEO is what you need to do in order to get your business seen by people who need you. You are here to help people to recover from addiction and our goal is to help you to get your message across to as many people as possible. Even if you just focus on your local area, you need strong SEO in order to reach those people."

Twomey says that these new addiction rehab digital marketing services are designed specifically to help rehabilitation centers to reach addicts. He says that given the number of addictions that are being reported on an annual basis, it is clear that the nation needs more rehab clinics to help addicts. He says that his team decided to focus some of their efforts on helping these clinics to reach addicts and their families in an effort to overcome the number of addictions that are being reported in the United States every year.

Studies show that addictions to prescribed pain medications have risen drastically over the past 10 years. Twomey says that getting the word out about quality and caring rehab centers is essential in helping to lower these numbers. He continues that no matter how many addiction facilities are available, none of them are going to be utilized properly if addicts and their families do not know about them, which is why they have decided to focus on helping these organizations to broaden their online reach.

Twomey says that there are a number of ways that an addiction facility can reach people and that his agency can help them to put strong strategies into place that get them the attention that they need. He urges rehab facilities to contact his agency to begin their digital marketing efforts so that they can begin reaching as many addicts and their families as possible. Rehab clinics that are interested in learning more can visit Mission to Market on Facebook or visit their company website where they offer insights on SEO and more information on the steps that rehab facilities need to take in order to reach addicts. Twomey states that his agency has the experience and knowledge of addiction facility SEO needed to help these organizations in their quest to rid the world of addiction.
