Bella Joi, a beauty company based in California, announced today that their breast stretch marks cream has become popular with pregnant women and sales are increasing. Bella Joi Stretch Mark Cream is highly popular among those who are looking for a cream that can aid in reducing breast stretch marks as well as help reduce the effects of the marks on the other areas of the body where it is common for pregnant women to develop them ? the stomach, thighs and buttocks.

?Our company has always been focused on our goal to help women bring back their self-confidence after they develop stretch marks in the belly, breasts and thighs. We want them to feel good again especially if the marks are affecting them negatively?, says Holly Richards, Bella Joi representative. ?While many products are in the market today, what sets our cream apart is that it was specially formulated to target red, white and purple stretch marks that some women get during pregnancy. It is gratifying to know that our sales have increased as more women realize the benefits of our cream.?

When it comes to the ingredients of Bella Joi Stretch Mark Cream, it contains antioxidants, oil and nourishing butters. Aside from this, it also contains Capric Triglyceride, which will ensure that the skin will not be left oily and greasy when the cream is applied. The formula is said to be very potent in addressing both old and new stretch marks that are very common especially with pregnant women.

Stretch marks are tears in the deep layers of the skin that occur during periods of rapid weight gain when the body grows too fast for the skin. During pregnancy a woman's breasts and belly grow the most so those are the two areas that are most affected by stretch marks. Daily moisturizing can help reduce the appearance of existing stretch marks.
