December 13, 2022 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

NYC grandparents' rights lawyer Ethan Steward (https://www.newyorkfamilylawgroup.com/practice-areas/grandparents-rights/) of the New York Family Law Group has recently updated their page on grandparents taking custody of children. The law firm?s page is a valuable resource that provides crucial information on grandparents' rights and the legal process for obtaining custody.

In the article, the NYC grandparents' rights lawyer says, ?The lawyers explain that in order for grandparents to qualify for custody, they must be able to provide grounds for custody and prove them. These grounds include parental unfitness, abandonment, surrender, persistent neglect, child abuse, or extended disruption of custody. The grandparent must petition the court, go to trial, and present evidence of the grounds.?

According to the National Center for Family and Marriage Research, the number of grandparents taking custody of their grandchildren has increased in recent years. In many cases, these grandparents are stepping in to provide a stable and loving home for children who have been neglected or abused by their parents.

The New York Family Law Group understands the unique challenges that grandparents face when seeking custody of their grandchildren. Their updated page offers detailed information on the legal process, including how to petition for custody and what factors the court considers in making a decision.

The page also provides important information on the rights of grandparents, including their right to seek visitation and access to their grandchildren. The New York Family Law Group's experienced grandparents' rights lawyers can provide guidance and support throughout the custody process.

"We are committed to helping grandparents who are taking on the important role of caring for their grandchildren," said attorney Ethan Steward, managing partner of the New York Family Law Group. "Our updated page offers valuable information and resources to support these grandparents in their journey."

Lastly, the lawyer emphasizes the importance of having a skilled family law attorney when dealing with matters such as visitation or custody of grandchildren. A skilled lawyer may be able to help the grandparents understand their roles and responsibilities and help them come to a favorable agreement.
