CRC Builders Inc., a general contractors company in Napa, CA, has announced that they have launched full house remodeling services in the Napa Valley, California. CRC is a provider of home building services to the Napa County and greater San Francisco Bay area of California. More information about their services can be gleaned from their website at <https://crcbuildersinc.com/general-contractors-napa-ca/>.

Jim Pitcher, owner of CRC Builders, says, "We're super excited to provide Napa and Napa Valley area property owners with our full house remodeling services. Call any time to schedule your free kitchen, bathroom or room remodeling estimate."

According to Jim Pitcher, four basic steps need to be taken for a home remodeling project. The first step is to choose the team that is made up of the architect and general contractor. The second step is to come up with a budget. Clients will need to specify the various requirements, particularly their expectations, and after consultation with the team, come up with a budget for the project. The third step is for the team to come up with the design that complies with the client's aesthetic requirements and the budget at the same time. The last step would be the actual implementation of the design for the home remodeling or construction.

For residential projects, CRC Builders can offer their services for the construction of estates and custom homes or whole house remodels. They have the expertise when it comes to residential remodeling because their projects have included whole house remodels, period home historic restorations, old house renovations, home additions, garage and master suite additions, new and updated kitchens, structural and seismic retrofit projects, and general home improvements.

CRC Builders provides clients with online access to a project management site so that they stay informed throughout the remodeling process. The site is a secure portal where clients can find out about the various details of the project, including upgrades, selections, photos, documents, financial decisions, and questions. And with the understanding that the project not just another job site but the home of the client, CRC Builders ensures a clean working environment, including containment and protection. Before they start the job, a pre-construction meeting is held with the client to discuss job-site logistics. Here, the areas in the house that will be affected are specified and how the contractor can do its best to isolate those areas from the inhabited parts of the house. This usually requires an adjacent staging area for keeping materials and tools that will be used for the project.

At the start of the remodeling project, all paintings, furniture, rugs and other delicate items are removed from the working area. Then the floors are protected with Ramboard. If the working area is located upstairs or far from an entry door, protection will be provided for the stairs, floors and hallways leading to the working area to prevent any damage caused by increased traffic while the project is underway.

With regards to containment, the contractor sets up plastic dust containment walls. The proposed location of the containment walls is discussed during the pre-construction meeting so that clients know what to expect. The purpose of these walls is to contain dust within the working area while allowing clients to access all parts of the house during construction. After the protection and containment walls have been put in place, they block off any HVAC ducts with plastic and tape to prevent dust from the construction from circulating throughout the home. Furthermore, they will place an air purifier just outside the working area to ensure that any dust that escapes will not find its way in the inhabited parts of the home.

CRC Builders are dedicated craftsmen of luxury custom homes and they combine their understanding of aesthetics with minute attention to detail and in-depth knowledge of building methods to provide a completed project that homeowners will consider a significant part of their lives. The company has focused in innovative Bay Area custom homes since 1994 and they offer their services to both residential and commercial clients.
