Stinson Insurance Consulting & Education LLC, an insurance expert company in West Palm Beach, FL, has released new information on how people can find an insurance expert witness. The company, which provides these services itself, in addition to general education and consulting on insurance matters, wants to stress that an expert witness can quite literally make or break a case. It is hoped that, through their information, more cases will be settled successfully and justly.

"The testimony of an insurance expert witness is vital to truly understanding the complexities of insurance claims," says Steven A. Stinson from Stinson Insurance Consulting & Education LLC. He adds, "We want to make sure people understand this importance and learn more about how to find a witness that will represent them properly."

According to Steven Stinson, it is crucial that expert witnesses have all the necessary credentials and qualifications to act in their role. This means that they should have extensive knowledge on insurance laws and specific cases. This should be demonstrated through peer evaluation and lengthy industry experience.

Furthermore, they should have a lot of experience working as an expert witness. As such, they should be able to demonstrate that they have been part of various cases and that their testimony has helped to sway a case. They must also be able to provide clear explanations in plain English, which means they do not make use of too much industry jargon, even if they do understand it.

One of the most important factors is that they maintain fully independent status. "An expert witness should support the side of the case for which they are hired," explains Steven Stinson. He adds, "However, they should also understand what the other side is likely to bring to the table and how they should respond. Only by being independent can an expert witness truly know both sides of the argument and use this to their advantage."

Those who require expert witness testimony in an insurance case are encouraged to contact Stinson Insurance Consulting & Education LLC using their online form on <http://www.stinsonforensic.com/contact-us/>.
