Louisville KY HVAC Contractor Receives Another 5 Star Customer Review

February 21, 2019

February 21, 2019 -

Louisville, Kentucky based Breckinridge Heating & Cooling is pleased to announce that they recently received another 5-star review from one of their previous clients. The client hired them for a Heating, Ventilation, and Air Conditioning (HVAC) unit installation and was incredibly satisfied with their work.

Suren H. said in a Google review, "Mark and his team from Breckinridge Heating and Cooling did an outstanding job installing a new Goodman air conditioning unit for us. Their technicians are all friendly, professional, and efficient. I highly recommend them."

Since the early 1960s, Breckinridge Heating & Cooling has been one of the most trusted local HVAC contractors in Louisville KY and the surrounding areas. They are a certified and insured company that provide a number of professional HVAC services, including repair, installation, and maintenance of air conditioning equipment, furnaces, heat pumps, and boilers to homeowners and businesses in the area.

"We believe that we are still in business, after more than 50 years in the industry, because we always strive to deliver high quality services and excellent results for the local community," said Mark Mason from

Breckinridge Heating & Cooling. We also ensure that all of our technicians are equipped with the necessary skills and technical knowledge required, so they can always address our customer's needs properly.

Mason also explained that they focus on being a customer-oriented brand by providing free cost estimates for clients who need new installations and replacements. In addition, he also mentioned that they do not charge extra fees for weekend projects, and that the company also provides 24-hour emergency HVAC services. Furthermore, Breckinridge Heating & Cooling also gives special discounts to senior citizens and veterans.

He continued that regular HVAC maintenance provides homeowners with a number of benefits, including low utility bills, healthy air, equipment efficiency, less repairs, and more savings in the long run.

In general, there are a lot of obvious reasons why HVAC monitoring and maintenance is very important. We advise homeowners to schedule regular system checks, as well as fix minor issues and problems as soon as they appear so they can enjoy all the comforts of a fully functioning HVAC system. Additionally, a well-maintained unit is also likely to have less serious problems. This means that there is then less hassle, fewer breakdowns and subsequent repairs, and no unnecessary costs. Furthermore, you are also prolonging the lifespan of your HVAC system with your regular maintenance regime, since dirty and unmaintained units need to work 20% harder to produce the same cooling or heating effect as a well maintained one, he said.

Those looking for a local HVAC repair service may consider reaching out to Breckinridge Heating & Cooling. They specialize in a number of HVAC related services, including furnace and air conditioning repair, installation, and maintenance. They are also considered one of the top HVAC service providers in Louisville and the surrounding areas, based on the positive reviews and recommendations they generally receive online.

Ashley Pierce, in a Google review, said, Our AC unit stopped working on a Saturday night. Breckenridge Heating & Cooling had their on-call service staff call me back within 10 minutes of my initial call. They arrived at our home by 9:00 AM Sunday morning, and our new AC unit was installed and ready to go by noon. I am beyond thrilled with the speedy service of this company. I highly recommend them.

They boast both an Amazing price and outstanding service, said Andrea Martin, another satisfied customer. My furnace went out during the weekend, and they were at my house within an hour of my call. After a thorough inspection, they told me that I had no choice but to replace my 23-year-old furnace. They installed a new one, and I was surprised that it was so affordable. Their technicians were friendly and professional, and the whole process was such a breeze. I highly recommend this company, and I will hire them again for all of my future HVAC needs.
