February 01, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Atascadero Home Protection Pros has announced that they are expanding their home security services in Atascadero, California and neighboring areas. The company is a security system supplier offering video monitoring systems, home security apps, and home security reviews for homes in Atascadero and nearby areas. Their home security systems feature video monitoring and interactive security capabilities. More information about these can be gleaned from their website and at <https://www.pressadvantage.com/organization/atascadero-home-protection-pros>.

An Atascadero Home Protection Pros spokesperson says, "We are proud to have expanded our home security services to homes and properties in Atascadero and surrounding areas. Our wireless alarm systems instantly add security and value to any home. As homeowners, you have the option to choose tracking the house alarm or leaving it unmonitored. Atascadero Home Protection Pros can do both for you, but it's important you know everything there is to know about your options before requesting installations."

According to the spokesperson, homeowners and property owners can choose between monitored or unmonitored alarm systems but they must be aware of the proper application of each type. Monitored alarm systems are designed to transmit information whenever the alarm is activated either by radio frequencies or by infrared light. The alarm is quiet and is therefore not heard by the intruder because the goal is to alert the authorities and catch the intruder. Those who would like to consult with the company can visit their office and locate this by visiting their Google Maps page at <https://goo.gl/maps/MUfEo8iyBnz>.

On the other hand, unmonitored alarm systems are designed produce loud alarms and may even be provided with flashing lights or siren to frighten intruders so that they may abort their plans. However, an unmonitored alarm system will not notify a monitoring company or the authorities about the break in and some intruders who realize this may not be discouraged.

Wireless security alarm systems are now preferred by many because they offer much more options and also because they can easily be installed, are more difficult to tamper with, have a more minimalist appearance, have no wires that can be damaged by rats and friction, and are easier to maintain.

For houses that are new or are being renovated, Atascadero Home Protection Pros suggests the use of wired security systems in order to be able position the cameras and other security devices in those places where they would be more than effective. On the other hand, wireless systems can be quickly installed anywhere in the house or property if the homeowner or property owner is adding a security system after the home has been built or to an already existing property.

Meanwhile, close-circuit TVs (CCTVs) are usually part of a home security system. These systems are still a good addition to a home security system but modern technology has also made possible the addition of motion detectors, heat sensors, and other cutting edge sensor devices.

CCTVs provide a way to guard both indoors and outdoors through a visual surveillance system. This can be augmented by sensors that can detect movement or body heat, which activates the alarm with loud sounds or blinding lights. The CCTV allows the homeowner to have peace of mind that the people left in the home, such as the elderly, children, nannies and more, are safe and sound. These CCTV and home security cameras can be added to a home fast because they are easy to install and are relatively inexpensive.

The spokesperson says, "You can find ready-made kits with any burglar alarm installer, or call the nearest Atascadero Home Protection Pros to custom-fit alarms, CCTVs and other security devices you wish to be installed on your home."
