March 26, 2019

March 26, 2019 -

Breckinridge Heating & Cooling has announced that they are offering 24 hour emergency HVAC services. The company is a licensed Master HVAC and comprehensively insured contractor serving Louisville and neighboring areas. They are one of the HVAC contractors in Louisville, KY, that offer their services for residential and light commercial buildings, offering repair services for air conditioners and furnaces, including maintenance and installation.

Mark Mason, owner of Breckinridge Heating & Cooling, says, "We're happy to announce that we are able to provide emergency HVAC services at any time of the day or night. We offer our emergency services 24 hours a day because we know that an emergency involving an HVAC system can occur any time."

The services provided by Breckinridge Heating & Cooling can be divided into several categories. These are heating repair, heating replacement, cooling repair, cooling replacement, HVAC maintenance, and other HVAC services.

The heating repair services are for homes and light commercial establishments that are experiencing problems with their heating system. In view of the temperatures in Louisville reaching very low levels, people really need the comfort provided by their heater. Some of the most common symptoms of a heating system that requires repair are: the fact that the pilot light is out; the fact that the furnace is not releasing warm air; the fact that the furnace will not turn on at all or will not remain on for more than a few minutes; the presence of loud or strange noises from the heating unit; and the observation that the blower either won't turn on at all or it is on constantly. Possible solutions are: burner repair; motor replacement; and replacement of the air filter. It is very important to get regular furnace cleanings and inspections to prevent such problems.

Sometimes homeowners and building owners will be faced with the question on whether to repair or replace their heating system. There are a number of factors that they need to consider. First of all, safety must always be taken into account first. For instance, if the unit has a cracked heat exchanger, there is the risk of a carbon monoxide leak. Second, the age of the unit must be considered. If the unit is more than a decade old, it is likely to be near its lifespan and is ready to be replaced. Third, it is recommended to replace an old unit if the cost of repairs are more than a third of the cost of replacement. And finally, all states require equipment with a minimum of Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency rating of 80 percent. It is advisable to replace the unit if it fails to comply with this standard.

The quality of the services provided by Breckinridge Heating & Cooling is attested by past customers who have issued testimonials. For example, A. Martin says, "My furnace went out on a Saturday morning and they came out within an hour of my call. They were affordable, friendly and professional! I don't know why anyone is saying their prices are high, they are one of the best priced places in town and I checked! I had to get my 23 year old furnace replaced and they did it fast and effectively and again ? the price just couldn't be beat! I highly recommend them and will use them again and again!?"
