South Texas Foot and Ankle Doctors, a podiatry practice in McAllen, TX, as revealed their acquisition of a new Saorsa Swift microwave therapy machine that they will be using for plantar warts treatment. The Saorsa Swift microwave therapy machine offers a convenient and quick way to get rid of plantar warts with only minimal pain and discomfort. This microwave therapy machine works by directing microwave energy to the affected tissue to quickly elevate its temperature, which will then stimulate the natural immune response to eliminate the warts. While plantar warts are not usually regarded to be a major health problem, they can cause much pain and discomfort, which is why patients will usually want to get rid of them. The plantar warts are painful whenever pressure is exerted on them when the patient is walking, running, or doing other activities.

It is important to note that the Swift microwave therapy machine is safe because it has already been approved by the FDA for use in the United States. In addition, only a small dosage of microwave energy is applied to the plantar warts. However, there are a number of patients who will have to consult with their doctor first before getting treated with the Swift microwave machine. These include patients who: are suffering from poor circulation; are wearing a pacemaker; are pregnant or breastfeeding; are immune-suppressed; or have metal plates or pins in their feet.

Microwaves have already been in use in medicine for more than three decades, particularly in the treatment of certain types of cancer. Furthermore, the Swift microwave machine has an applicator, which looks like a wand or pen. This enables the podiatrist to easily and precisely direct the microwave energy towards the plantar warts, reaching deep down to the root-like growths. In addition, the Swift microwave treatment doesn?t cause any cuts or damage to the skin, which means there will be no need for bandages or dressings.

The applicator of the Swift machine has a disposable tip that needs to be replaced with a new one for each treatment session. A sensor within the Swift machine prevents the machine from operating until the tip has been replaced with a new one. This is important because warts are contagious.
